31-51-13 -12.50*...I think I have the worst unit total of any sport posted on the forum, sweet!
In MLS:
1.0* Chicago +350 (Playing @ KC who is undefeated at home. I think that run ends tonight. This will be KC's 4th match in 10 days, 3rd in last 6 days. I also like that Chicago is in good form. Let's cash a big dog)
0.5* Chicago/KC draw +240 (Just to cover in case this match is bogged down in the midfield)
Good luck!

Trying to play multiple plays in soccer daily during this "off" time for the larger leagues can be a very difficult proposition. Even limiting yourself to one tournament such as Euro 2012 is incredibly hard.

I greatly prefer league matches (England/Spain/Germany/Italy) over any other (Internationals & tournaments). The "true favorites" out of the top 4 or so leagues seem to come through more often than not. The MLS continues to slightly improve in its quality of play (I believe last year the under 2.5's were hitting @ 60%+ clip but this year it is 50/50 with more goal scoring) thanks to foreign players. I usually get crushed by that league in years past, but have felt very comfortable making more plays this season (same goes for Argentina/Mexico/Brazil).
